US DHS launches new Website

ALC is recognized at the ceremony as a major contributor

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the US Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS) have launched a new website for the USCIS. The new launch is part of President Obama's pledge to enhance the tools available to people who have moved to the US or are applying for a US visa, in order to increase transparency. The website offers information about moving to the US, applying for US visas and US work visas and enables people to review the status of their case. At the unveiling ceremony on September 23rd, ALC's President and CEO, along with his staff, were publicly recognized for their contribution to the effort by Homeland Security Secretary Napolitano and her staff.

ALC is very proud to have contributed to this endeavor and continues its commitment to facilitate access to information for our citizens and Government employees alike.
