ALC Awarded ASL Contract with Google

ALC, Inc. has recently been awarded a contract with Google for the provision of Sign Language Interpretation and CART (Communication Access Real-time Translation) Services to Google's hard of hearing employees.

This year-long contract will allow ALC, Inc. the opportunity to provide these essential services at numerous sites within the United States, as well as the company's international satellite locations. Ad-hoc services will be offered in multiple locations throughout the continental United States, while recurring, full-time assignments will be supported at Google Headquarters in Mountain View, CA and New York City, NY. ALC's highly-skilled interpreters will also provide interpretation services in Dublin, Ireland, expanding their capabilities outside the continental United States while simultaneously developing ALC's rapport with the Irish Sign Language community. The company's relationship with Google is expected to flourish and extend beyond the scope of the current contract. ALC is proud to offer their services to Google.

ALC is rapidly becoming one of the most trusted providers of quality ASL services to clients in both the government and private sector. ALC offers RID and NAD certified interpreters for ASL, Manually Coded English (MCE), Pidgin Signed English, Computer Aided Real-Time Translation (CART), Cued Speech and Voice-to-sign/Sign-to-voice.

ALC will begin providing services to Google on January 1, 2014.
